

Welcome to Boomer Hell

The Boomers insist on making the world safe for their delusions.

One of the most highly anticipated films of the summer, Steven Spielberg's "Disclosure Day" came out yesterday. It is certifiably fresh on the website Rotten Tomatoes, and has received a more enthusiastic response from film critics (whom 81% approve) than from viewers (whom 75% approve). Spielberg himself generated controversy when he remarked that the film could make Christians question their faith.

After watching the film, David Icke warned that the film's sympathetic portrayal of aliens is meant to condition us to welcome our new alien overlords. With the White House promising to release UFO files, conspiracy theorists believe that the government is preparing a fake alien invasion to justify an AI surveillance state.

This narrative is neat and tidy, but there is a glaring problem: “Disclosure Day” is unwatchable, and its premise stupid. The movie’s heroes attempt to broadcast a video on television to reveal a government alien cover-up, and dark sinister forces attempt to stop them. Why couldn’t they just upload their video to YouTube like I do? Who watches the television evening news anymore? Why couldn’t the powers-that-be flood the Internet with fake alien videos, and have Ben Shapiro promote them?

The movie was written and directed by Steven Spielberg, who is 79 years old. “Disclosure Day” marks his 33rd film, and he spent two months in the summer of 2023 hammering out the plot outline. With his power and status, he could have hired an amazing team of writers to imagine a seductive and hypnotic story that would have viewers praying for an alien invasion. Unfortunately, the writer he did hire (David Koepp) adhered loyally to Spielberg’s story, and that’s why “Disclosure Day” is so boring and incoherent.

“Disclosure Day” is not part of a diabolical plot – we could only wish that our overlords were so clever and strategic. The movie is the by-product of the delusions of a boomer so rich and powerful he can force-feed his narcissism down our throats.

Trump’s reign has been so outrageous that it has done the impossible, and made many nostalgic for Joe Biden. Remember all his accomplishments as President? You don’t? Well, neither do I, and that’s why I’m nostalgic. He was of the Silent Generation, and he had the decency to sleep through his Presidency. The world collectively sighs with relief whenever Trump takes a nap. His Secretary of State Marco Rubio told reporters that whenever he travels abroad with Trump he has to hide himself in order to get any rest.

For the thirty-ninth time now, Trump has declared that he’s wrapped up a deal to end the war. This time, he really means it. He still has yet to explain why the war started in the first place. He has yet to explain how he would get Israel to stop attacking Lebanon, which would be a necessary condition for any permanent peace. Yet the markets do respond positively to his pronouncements, possibly because he is so earnest in his self-delusion. When he says that Netanyahu obeys him, Trump believes it.

More so than Spielberg, Trump has the power to warp reality to fit his delusions. It seems like he genuinely believed that once he killed the Ayatollah Iran would surrender like Venezuela. It seems like he believed that the Europeans would happily gift Greenland, and that Canada would rush to become the 51st state. It seems like he genuinely believes that the American people wants him to become king.

Over time, Trump can only become more delusional. Those loyalists who have rightfully pushed back against him – such as Tulsi Gabbard and JD Vance – have either been forced out, or have been sidelined. He has turned against Tucker Carlson and Candace Owens, and he has hounded out of office Marjorie Taylor-Greene and Thomas Massie.

The sycophants who encourage his wildest delusions can only see their influence grow. Who could believe holding a UFC fight outside the White House in a Washington summer would be a good idea?

Meanwhile, Trump's children are getting rich of his delusions. Trump pardoned Binance Founder Changpeng Zhao after his company went into business with the Trumps, and crypto-currency has made them filthy rich. The Pentagon just awarded $620 million to a company linked to Donald Trump Jr.

The corruption of the Trump children is so blatant and outrageous that it has emboldened even Hunter Biden to speak out. "If you're concerned about who's selling out America, take a look at who's funding Jared Kushner," he said.

Biden is referring to Saudi Arabia's $2 billion investment in Affinity Partners, which Kushner set up in 2021. Kushner is currently developing Albania's Sazan Island, a strategic island in the Adriatic Sea. This has ignited wide-spread protests, but Albania's Prime Minister insists on honoring the contract – he knows who his true masters are.

It is convenient to think that Trump is an outlier. Unfortunately, he is not.

Today, power, wealth, and status are concentrated in the hands of a selfish, materialistic, and callous generation that refuses to pass the baton. There are so many things that cannot make sense, unless you realize this.

Thomas Massie had won every demographic except the Baby Boomers, who propelled his opponent to a ten-point victory. Despite the mounting evidence that the Israelis are hell-bent on setting the Middle East on fire and that Trump's war against Iran cannot be won, the Boomers continue to support Israel as well as Trump's war against Iran.

Then there is the appointment of the mediocre Bari Weiss, who will soon lead both CBS News and CNN. Under Weiss, CBS News have seen declining ratings and staff rebellions. She will yield ever more influence over time because she ensures that the Boomers get the news they expect.

We no longer live in a world in which markets or ratings or even profits matter. Consider how Elon Musk has become the world's first trillionaire, and how oil continues to remain below $100 a barrel even though most of the world's strategic petroleum reserves will be depleted in a month or two. The Boomers are in charge, and they demand that the world conforms to their delusions.

And the elite have no intention of ever dying. Last year, in Beijing, Russia's Putin, China's Xi, and North Korea's Kim discussed how to live longer with organ transplants. Putin himself has mandated $26 billion into longevity research.

The urban legend in China is that everyone is just an organ storage container for an elderly official. Here, China is ahead of the curve.

Welcome to Boomer Hell, where the Boomers would rather destroy the world than ever admit they're wrong.
